Thursday, September 15

No one is feeling the effects of our aging population more than the “sandwich generation” – those adults who are responsible for taking care of children still living at home and also frequently supporting their aging parents. This support takes different forms for different families; it can be emotional, physical, or financial. Many times, it’s all three.

This population of caregivers, typically aged 47+, are feeling the overwhelming worry, stress, guilt, and sadness of dealing with an aging parent.

This new caregiver role is impacting your workforce. What can you do as HR professionals, C-suite executives, and managers to assist your staff?

Stephanie Leanes, Director – Caregiver Support at the Lutheran Home and Harwood Place, will discuss the growing role of the caregiver, supportive coping strategies and effective communication techniques to help employers understand the caregiver experience. Please join us for this important topic and a complimentary evening of light snacks and beverages.
